FOREWORD

You were born to win, but to be a winner, you must plan to win, prepare to win, and expect to win.

Delhi Public School is a name synonymous with quality and excellence. Innovation and ingenuity is the hallmark of our institution that sets it apart on the country's education map. The goals set by us are continuously pursued with perseverance, hard work and scientific spirit. Our new comprehensive curriculum design is the outcome of this spirit. The designing of a curriculum for a school requires vision. The problems that one faces are:

- How to make effective use of time available in an academic year?
- How to divide the complete course evenly throughout the year?
- How to strike a balance between all extra-curricular activities and academic work?

The Delhi Public School Education rules 1973 in Chapter II Clause 31 states that in an academic year a school has to put in 1000 hours of work, 180 days are to be devoted in intensive teaching and an additional 20 days are set aside for examinations and remedial work.

To distribute this study time evenly over the year, the school has devised a detailed cycle split of the syllabus. The syllabus of each subject has been split into 12 to 16 cycles with each cycle covering 8 to 15 working days. The 180 working days have been divided into two terms with each term spanning 90 days approximately. The remaining 30 days are devoted to testing and revision work. Each cycle is then split up into the number of periods required to complete the course listed in the cycles. This approach has two advantages:

- There is a uniformity of work in all the classes.
- The students and their parents know well in advance what course is going to be covered in which period. This will especially facilitate the students who due to some reason have to take leave for some time.

This approach is an experiment which certainly has room for new ideas and suggestions. It is my sincere hope that this works like an effective method for the implementation of the requirements of the curriculum. Wish you all the best for the new academic session 2023-2024.
